Ariana LoGiudice is Counsel in Saiber's Gaming Law and Administrative & Regulatory practice groups. Ariana has over 5 years' experience as a regulatory attorney in the financial services industry, serving as in-house counsel and in a compliance role for two leading global investment banks.

At Saiber, Ariana employs her past experience within the highly regulated financial services industry to help guide the Firm's gaming clients through a myriad of complicated regulatory challenges. She represents the full spectrum of businesses within the gaming industry, from gaming equipment suppliers and technology providers to casino operators and online sportsbooks. In the emerging sector of online sports-betting, Ariana provides advice to sports-betting businesses and helps guide them through the licensing process in connection with their efforts to obtain approvals to operate online and land-based sportsbooks throughout the United States. Ariana also monitors legislation and advises clients of the state-specific gaming regulations and licensing requirements.

Prior to joining Saiber, Ariana was an Assistant Vice President at Credit Suisse, where she served as an attorney in the investment banking and global markets divisions. In those roles, Ariana provided legal and regulatory advice to firm business units, working closely with and responding to inquiries disseminated by regulatory agencies, including the CFTC, NFA, SEC, and FINRA.
